ATHLETICS MAY PLAY HERE

Will Play Exhibition Game if they Win the Pennant. Ira Plank Says They are Anxious to Come to Gettysburg.

Provided the Athletics win the World Series Gettysburg stands an excellent chance of having them play an exhibition game on Nixon Field, some time during the week of October 19th.
The team has decided to go on a "barn-storming" trip if they have the fortune to vanquish the Boston Nationals and they are all keen to come to Gettysburg. If they should lose the World series they intend to disband until the Spring practice but from present indications our chance of seeing the Pennant Holders has never been better. The desire to visit the Battlefield is not alone that of viewing the historic ground; Eddie Plank's home has probably more to do with their coming than any other attraction. Plank is a favorite with his own team as well as with the fans of the country, and while some of his team mates have been his guests here the majority of the team has never seen Gettysburg.

Contingent upon their winning, the Philadelphia crowd has also arranged to play games at Chambersburg and Carlisle. It will be necessary to provide a guarantee for their appearance here, and while no amount has been named Ira Plank, who is endeavoring to further the project, thinks they will not require more than $200. Many of the county people are ardent base ball enthusiasts, in fact, to such an extent that they are sure to attend a game of this sort. With their admissions in addition to the regular town fans and the student body to draw from, it should be easy to clear money provided the tickets are sold for fifty.
Coach O'Brien has agreed to find some other place for foot ball practice on the afternoon that may be set aside for the game. Although the town team has been broken up for some weeks most all the men who played during the latter part of the summer are either in town or attending College. Stair, who can be depended upon to pitch a steady game at all times will probably be the greatest loss, especially since Hoar, the other pitcher, is now playing foot ball and would not likely be in condition to pitch. It is thought John Lower, of McKnightstown who has been secured for the game. He is home from Texas where he has been playing ball for the past few years and bears an excellent record.

ELECT OFFICERS

College Lutheran Church Elects Officers. Will Make Repairs.

Two deacons; Prof. Albert Billheimer and Dr. J. E. Musselman and two elders; Prof. C. F. Sanders and Dr. H. C. Allemap were elected at a congregational meeting held by the College Lutheran Church last evening.
The members decided to re-decorate the lecture room and a committee was appointed to act in conjunction with the regular property committee for that purpose. It is proposed to replace the old carpet, paper and repaint the room at an approximate expense of $200, most of which was subscribed during the meeting.

WERE BUSY EVERY MINUTE

Something Doing all the Time for the Members of the State Charities Association During their Visit Here.

Two hundred and fifty members of the State Charities Association announced to come here to-day from Carlisle where the convention is in session shrank to seventy three. That number arrived on the 9:15 train over the Reading and enjoyed being scrambled by the awaiting hackmen.
That they were not idle while here is evident from an inspection of the day's program. The train was fifteen minutes late and between the time of their arrival and 11:30 they were supposed to cover the entire first day's fight. They then visited the county Alms House and were brought to the Eagle and the Gettysburg Hotels for dinner.

Three hours of the afternoon were devoted to a review of the second and third day's fights, after which they returned on the four o'clock train to resume the regular session of their convention this evening at Carlisle.

None of the local Poor Directors are members of the State Association and for that reason no official provision was made here for their reception. Some of the prominent men among the party who are especially interested in the conduct of county homes expressed themselves as being pleased with the appearance of Adams County's House.

MANY AT HARRISBURG

Firemen's Convention Draws Quite a Crowd from Town.

Considering the poor prospect of having a clear day more people than were expected journeyed to Harrisburg to witness the parade of Pennsylvania Firemen held at that place to-day. About eighty tickets were sold for the early morning train and a number of others joined their friends later in the day, going on the eleven o'clock train.

The local organization made their usual creditable appearance in the day's procession. An unique feature was the decorated pony team of Allen B. Plank. Mr. Plank always takes an enthusiastic part in celebrations of the sort and his out-fit attracted attention all along the line.

PAPAL ATTACHE AT EMMITSBURG

Archbishop Seton, of Heliopolis, wants to "Be Buried with His Fathers." Has Come to Live at Mount St. Mary's College.

In addition to the many prominent men of the Catholic church who have resided at the denominational institution across the border the Most Rev. Robert Seton, D. D., titular Archbishop of Heliopolis, has now taken up his permanent residence at Mount St. Mary's College, near Emmitsburg.

The venerable prelate, who is a grandson of Mother Seton, who founded the Sisters of Charity in the United States, has been for many years attached to the Papal court at Rome, and has only recently returned to America. He was born in 1839, and was educated at Mount St. Mary's College, with which institution his family has been in close connection for over a century. He is the author of several books on Church subjects, and is one of the most prominent ecclesiastics connected with the Roman Catholic church in the United States. Notwithstanding his age, he is full of life and vigor and one of the most courtly gentlemen ever met.

He says he expects to remain at Mount St. Mary's until his death and be buried beside his fathers on the mountain side.

SPECIAL SERVICE

Methodist Congregation has Prayer Service for Shut-Ins.

A beautiful inspiration prompted a special service during the prayer meeting hour in the Methodist church, Wednesday evening, for the shut-ins of the congregation. In connection with this service personal messages from those who cannot attend church services were read by the pastor. The girl's chorus sang an appropriate selection. The meeting was deeply impressive and was very much enjoyed by the goodly sized number in attendance.

LARGE LIST OF ACCIDENTS

Abbotstown Man is Thrown from Bicycle. Woman Breaks Ankle. Misfortunes in all Sections of the County.

George Metzgar, of Abbotstown, who operates a buttonhole machine in the factory of the New Oxford Shoe Company, met with a painful injury one evening recently. He makes the trip between his home and the factory at New Oxford each morning and evening on a bicycle. As he was passing along the street of Abbotstown on this particular evening a young boy of that place, playfully threw a piece of wood at the rider. It was caught between the spokes of the front wheel, which caused the front fork of the machine to rear up, and throw the rider to the street. He sustained a fracture of several of his ribs and a dislocation of one elbow joint from the fall.

Mrs. N. C. Deatrick, of Tyrone township, was painfully hurt one night last week when she fell down a flight of stairs at her home. She was awakened about midnight by noises at the chicken house and was hurrying over in the dark to awaken her son, Jacob, when she fell headlong down an open stairway. Her cries of distress brought the father and son to her side. She was carried back to her room and her injuries found to be numerous bruises in addition a painful hurt of her spine. Mrs. Deatrick has not yet fully recovered from the effects of the fall.

W. C. Albright, residing near Green Ridge school-house, Hamilton township, met with a bad accident last week that will keep him out of employment for some time. Mr. Albright was engaged at peeling bark off of posts when one of the heavy pieces of timber fell upon his arm, breaking the large bone and cracking the smaller bone, near the wrist. Dr. Leh, of Hampton, gave the injured member necessary surgical attention. Emmert Simpson, a Reading township farmer, met with a serious injury a few days ago. Mr. Simpson was hauling wheat to the East Berlin Mill and was walking by the side of the wagon, when his right foot was caught under the heavy wheel which passed over the foot and bally smashed it.

Mrs. Noah M. Baker, of Hamilton township, met with a mishap a few days ago, which is causing her considerable inconvenience as well as much pain. While attending to duties about her home she, in some manner tripped and fell, breaking a small bone in her right ankle. Dr. Miller, of Abbotstown, adjusted the injury.

Edward, the 10 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. William Kuhn, of Hamilton township, while attending to a colt last Friday, was kicked in the face. Four of the lad's teeth were knocked out, a large gash cut in his lip and other minor bruises inflicted.

LOSE PLAYER

Swope, who Played on College Team Returns to Susquehanna.

Fred Swope, a foot ball player who came to Gettysburg this year from Susquehanna University and, who was expected to greatly strengthen the Gettysburg team was persuaded to return to Seins Grove several days ago when he was visited by some of his old college mates from that institution.

While here Swope filled the position of half back, showing much promise in his work. He has regularly played full back on the Susquehanna team. No cause has been assigned for his decision to return except that the call of his associates was too strong to ignore.

THEIR CENTER WEAKENS

The Allies Drive Back the Kaiser's Forces.

BATTLE FRONT EXTENDED

Paris Reports Violent Action on Both Flanks.

London, Oct. 8.—The battle line in the western war zone is now practically continuous from upper Alsace to Antwerp.

French bulletins report that cavalry of the allies is engaged as far north as Armentieres, on the Belgian border, and violent fighting is reported in west and east Flanders.

The great gap between the forces operating on the Somme and Aisne and those at Antwerp has thus been closed, and the two campaigns become practically one; the defeat of the Germans in northern France will mean the relief of Antwerp, while a German victory at Antwerp would be likely to influence greatly the battle in northern France.

An official bulletin issued in London states that hard fighting is in progress north of the river Oise and at Lens, twenty miles south of the Belgian border. A night bulletin from the Paris war office adds that German attacks have been repulsed on the right and left wings and that ground previously lost between Chaumes and Roye has been regained. An advance in the center is also announced.

Berlin states officially that the fighting of the German army on its right wing has been successful, but that no decision has been reached in the counter attacks along the line of Arras, Albert and Roye.

The bulletins follow:

LONDON. "North of the Oise and at Lens, nine miles northeast of Arras, there is hard fighting.

"Elsewhere a slight advance or retreat varies. Throughout the line the reports are generally satisfactory.

"The French army is fighting with the greatest dash and bravery."

PARIS.

"Except on the two wings where the German attacks have been repulsed there has been nearly complete calm along the front.

"On our left wing the German cavalry has been held in check; to the north of Lille it has been driven back.

"Between Chaumes (midway between St. Quentin and Amiens) and Roye the ground previously ceded has been retaken.

"On the center we have made an advance on certain points.

"There is nothing to report on our right wing."

An earlier report said: "On our left wing the battle still continues with great violence. The opposing fronts extend into the region between Lens (nine miles north-east of Arras) and La Bassée (thirteen miles southwest of Lille) and are being lengthened by masses of cavalry which are in grips as far as the vicinity of Armentieres (nine miles northwest of Lille and virtually on the Belgian frontier).

"On the front extending from the Somme to the Meuse there is nothing to report.

"In the Woëvre district the enemy made a new effort to stop our progress, but his attacks again failed."

BERLIN.

The German general staff, in its report on the situation in the western arena of the war said the fighting on the German right wing in France had been successful.

A communication says: "Continuous French outflanking movements against our right wing have extended the battle front until it is now north of Arras, west of Lille and west of Lens (nine miles north-east of Arras). Our advance guards are in touch with the enemy's cavalry.

"No decision yet has been reached in our counter attacks along the line between Arras, Albert and Roye.

"The situation remains unchanged along the battle front between the Oise and the Meuse in the vicinity of Verdun and in Alsace-Lorraine."

Half a million men are engaged in the great double flanking movement in northeastern France, with the Germans pressing forward in an effort to cut off and surround the French troops near Arras and Douai. This enterprise, which began last week, is being pushed with the utmost vigor by the invaders. The allies were evidently taken by surprise, because they thought the Germans did not have enough reserve troops for such an audacious attempt.

The new German army, which has been pushed northward from Belgium, holds a strong position northwest of Lille. A part of the advanced lines stretches as far as Ypres, which is only a little more than twenty miles from the coast of the English channel.

The end of the great battle of the Aisne, which has been raging for the past twenty-five days, is not yet at hand. Despite the constant fighting and shifting of activities, the main lines of both armies are still intact, and the doughy German commander on the German right, General Von Kluck, seems absolutely determined to follow the instructions of the Kaiser "to win or die trying."

Attacks and counter attacks are still in progress along the heights of the Meuse, where both French and Germans have claimed successes. However, nothing decisive has developed in that quarter. In the center there has been a lull. Although the German army of General Von Bulow has been weakened to strengthen the right flank, the position of the invaders in that region is too strong to permit of a general assault by the French.

The British are fighting gallantly against the Germans north of Solons, and it has been mainly through their courage and fighting ability that the Germans lost good positions.

Large numbers of British wounded have been brought to Paris since Sunday. The English soldiers were exposed to a deadly rifle and machine gun fire when they moved forward to storm the German redoubts. Within the past twenty-four hours two English generals were brought from the front seriously wounded.

TWO MORE FORTS FALL AT ANTWERP

Germans Claim to Hold Five Strongholds.

Berlin, Oct. 8.—It is announced here that two more forts have been taken by the Germans at Antwerp. They are Forts Kessel and Broechem, which form part of the outer line of defense on which Forts Waelhem, Wavre-St. Catherine and Koenigshoyt stand. The latter forts were reported to have fallen two days ago.

The announcement of their capture says they were unable to resist the destructive power of the German siege guns.

"The capitulation of Antwerp can be only a matter of a few days," the announcement adds.

Will Bombard City.

London, Oct. 8.—A dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph company from Antwerp gives the following official communication:

"The military governor has informed the burgo-master that a bombardment of Antwerp is imminent, and that the people who wish to flee from the town are requested to leave."

"The bombardment will have no influence on the town's resistance, which will be pushed to the extreme limit."

This announcement indicates that the Germans have penetrated the defenses of Antwerp, although it was reported that attacks on the forts were slackening. It also was said that the appearance of German troops at Lille indicated that Germany had been forced to draw forces from Antwerp to relieve the German right wing in France, which was hard pressed by the allies.

DOUBLE GUARD ON SONORA BORDER

Wounded U. S. Trooper Believed to Be Dying.

CAVALRY MAY INTERFERE

Villa's General Says There Will Be No Further Attack Pending Peace Conference.

Naco, Ariz., Oct. 8.—The American guard on the border near Monument No. 9, where Trooper Bradford was shot by a Mexican bullet on Tuesday, has been doubled.

Carranza troops, commanded by General Benjamin Hill, are intrenching themselves fifty feet from the border, apparently as a protection from an attack by United States troops, which they seem to anticipate.

The situation is becoming grave. It may be brought to a crisis by the death of Trooper Wilson, who was shot on Sunday night. He is reported in a serious condition at Fort Huachuaca, where he was taken on Monday for the removal of the bullet.

Governor Maytorena, commander of the Villa forces, has sent word that there will be no further attack on General Hill, pending the result of the conference at Aguas Calientes, but the Carranzistas now show indications of taking the offensive, and this may precipitate interference by the American cavalry.

Prepare Program For Peace.

Aguas Calientes, State of Aguas Calientes, Oct. 8.—The first meeting of Constitutional army generals, representing First Chief Venustiano Carranza and General Francisco Villa, was held here, preliminary to the national convention, which will open later in the week.

While the program for the conference is being drawn up, war activities among both the Carranzistas and the Villistas are going on.

The outlook for an adjustment of the factional troubles is gloomy. General Villa is at Aguas Calientes in person to enforce his demands, and it seems certain that he will issue an ultimatum that it carry out all of the pledges of the Constitutional party, chief of which is land distribution among the peons.

So high is the feeling among the delegates that an actual clash in the convention hall would not be unexpected.

It is believed that First Chief Carranza will not come to Aguas Calientes from Mexico City.

WAR LOSSES 1,160,000

Berlin War Office Places Enemy's Casualties at 725,000.

Berlin, Oct. 8.—Attaches of the war office estimated that the losses of all the armies engaged in the European war have reached the enormous total of 1,160,000 killed, wounded and missing.

The German losses up to Sept. 1 numbered 117,000. Since then 23,000 more have been listed, and it is estimated that further losses up to the present time have increased the German total to 225,000.

The British, French and Belgian losses are estimated at 325,000. Russia, the war officials declare, has suffered more heavily than any other nation. They fix that country's loss at 400,000 men.

Austria's losses are estimated at 125,000, while the German officials believe that Serbia and Montenegro have lost 85,000 men. In making these estimates, it was pointed out, there is no reliable information at hand concerning the situation in any country but Germany.

Falls From Horse: Killed.

Towanda, Pa., Oct. 8.—Herbert Manchester, three years old, son of Edwin Manchester, a farmer near Potterville, Bradford county, fell from a horse and broke his neck, dying instantly. The boy pleaded with his father for a ride on a farm horse, and his request was complied with. The father went in the barn, and the horse started away and would not stop. The boy fell off and was picked up dead by the father.

President to Aid Glynn.

Washington, Oct. 8.—Support to be given Governor Glynn and the Democratic ticket in New York in the November campaign occupied the attention of President Wilson and his political advisers. Secretary Bryan wanted to speak in New York next Tuesday, but it was found arrangements could not be made. Secretary McAdoo and Secretary Redfield will probably take his place.

Albanians Kill Christians.

Athens, Oct. 8.—Mohammedans are plundering and killing Christians in Albania, according to a dispatch from Janina. This says that many villages about Berat have been burned and that refugees declare that at least 200 men, women and children have been massacred.

GRAPHIC CHAPTERS IN NEWS OF GREATEST WAR DRAMA IN HISTORY

Picturesque and Thrilling Scenes on Europe's Battlefields.

Interesting Incidents Showing the Lighter Side of Great Conflict.

MANY a paragraph in the news from Europe's theater of war is a story in itself. Some of the best of these graphic bits are given here:

Details received of the fighting near Verdun show that it was an African battalion that checked a recent attack of the German Imperial guard. A survivor of the battle, who has arrived in Paris, told the following story of the fight:

"The sun was just rising when our outposts came back on our main force and informed us that the Imperial guard was coming. Soon afterward we could see pointed helmets glistening in the sun rapidly advancing.

"Deceived by our silence the guard had come on even to the barbed defenses and began cutting them before our trumpets sounded an order for volley firing. The first line of the enemy seemed just to melt away under our fire. The second line appeared to be shaken for an instant, but on it came.

"We could plainly see the officers in the lead, waving their swords and encouraging their men to the assault. Another volley and the second line thinned out, but a third line came on, and the mass crossed the line of wire defenses.

"When 'Charge' was sounded we rushed forward to meet them. Then our boys commenced to fall, but our impetus was too much for the guard, which was mowed down and dispersed.

"Of one regiment only a single company remained. It was led by a tall lieutenant, with a boyish face. He wore a monocle and carried a revolver. This company stood to the last man and that last man was the lieutenant. He refused to surrender and stood his ground alone until the bayonets of the zouaves beat him down."

Air Scouts Save Brigade.

General Gough of Curragh fame saved his dashing cavalry brigade from annihilation by his lightning-like last moment decision. Three times his hussar lancers formed to charge a row of invisible German guns. Three times the gallant 1,800 had to disperse, their errand unaccomplished.

For the fourth time the brigade assembled. The men only awaited the word to charge. A score or more on the extreme right had actually anticipated the order to move forward when General Gough rode furiously through the ranks.

"Good God, Dickson!" he yelled to a subordinate. "Stop them! There is barred wire just ahead!"

Those who had rode ahead heard the wild shout and turned in their saddles just in time to save themselves. The brigade had been warned in the nick of time by air men who had seen the wire glimmering in a sudden burst of sunshine.

Hit Twice, Runs to Safety.

"Men fell like corn before the resper." a wounded lance sergeant in the King's Own Yorkshire Light Infantry wrote home to his mother from the hospital ship St. David. "Now it's over I must say the last few days have been horror, fighting all the time," he continued. "Our last action was the worst. I tell you truly I never expected to get out alive. The Germans must have lost thousands, but they were ten to one, so we had to retire. The shrapnel and hail of lead and bullets—I see it all now. I won't say more, but I got a bullet in my right leg and kept on for twenty yards or more. I got a great piece of shrapnel shell in my neck—laid me senseless.

"I came to again and ran through it all and made good. It's wonderful how you can run with a bullet through your leg. I have not been at it long, but fellows say they saw more in the last four days than they did in three years in Africa. That's the truth. Ah, well, I'm not grumbling! I'm not disgraced or melted like so many poor fellows so let us rejoice over it all."

A story is told in England of a farmer boy who came from the field to be informed by his father that his brother had been killed in action. "Well, I must take his place," said the boy. Then he walked to the recruiting station, enlisted and is now at the front.

The War's Iron Foundry.

An opportunity to watch closely the German and Austrian artillery attack on French forts south of Verdun, was given a correspondent who had been with the Germans at Metz. His trip over the battlefield showed nothing of the traditional battle tumult, such as attacking infantry, racing cavalry and galloping artillery. The heavy artillery could not be seen. There was the tremendous detonation of siege piece and large columns of smoke arose from burning villages. The black surface thus created was studded everywhere with the white clouds from exploding projectiles.

On the road a few wounded were making their way to the base hospitals. Beyond that the battlefield gave the impression of a tremendous iron plant, with its masses of artillery machinery and attending noises.

The German and Austrian heavy siege pieces were marvelously concealed.

Was the Only One.

Fix—"Wasn't it Admiral Porter who said: 'Take no quarter from the enemy'?" Dix—"Dunno! It was he's the only porter that ever said such a thing."—Boston Transcript.

IN NEWS OF GREATEST WAR DRAMA IN HISTORY

Interesting Incidents Showing the Lighter Side of Great Conflict.

Friendship Greater Than War.

Among the wounded arriving at Petrograd were a Russian reserve officer, a teacher by profession, and a German, likewise a teacher.

The two men lay side by side, unconscious, on the battlefield of Tamazaw. The Russian teacher had lanced the German with his sword, severely wounding him, but himself had received a bullet from another German soldier. They were put into the same ambulance. When they regained consciousness the Russian finding in the German the soldier whom he had sabered was seized with a sudden emotional compassion for the victim of his sword and started speaking to him in a friendly and remorseful tone.

The German, at first reticent and morose, did not answer the Russian, but eventually yielded to his kind, winning attitude and entered into a conversation. The foes were brought to the same hospital in Petrograd and placed in the same ward. The German was overjoyed at this and said to his fellow professional in excellent Russian:

"War is war, but friendship after the war is a totally different thing. I never dreamed that Russians were such nice, generous people. I cannot help loving them now after the kind treatment received at their hands. We are fighting with them in vain."

Spared For By Ruse.

The London Standard prints the following anecdote sent from Petrograd and having for its setting the fighting which recently took place at Filipov, near the Russo-German frontier:

A German Pole of Posen came up to a Russian and raised his bayonet. While he was about to pierce it through the heart of the soldier the latter, who was a Russian Pole, addressed him in Polish:

"Aren't you afraid of God to kill one of your own?"

The Pole of Posen answered, likewise in Polish:

"Well, what can we do? Here they are coming, my comrades. They will catch me in the act of speaking to an enemy in Polish. We are both lost. You lie still and pretend to be dead."

In order to complete the deception and give no cause for suspicion the German Pole raised his bayonet again and struck the ground, crying out loudly so the approaching German soldiers could hear him:

"I have killed three Muscovites. Now there are no more here. Let us go a bit higher up."

When complete darkness enveloped the battlefield the German Pole came, made a close search and managed to find the Russian Pole whose life he had spared, thanks to the racial bond existing between the two foes.

Carrying the wounded man on his back, the German Pole got away from the German zone unobserved and, after a long journey on foot, brought his wounded comrade to the Russian front lines just after midnight, where he left him, wishing him a friendly farewell, and returned to his own camp.

German Amazon Regiments.

Says a dispatch from Copenhagen: Germany is considering plans for the formation of regiments of amazons. Details as to the styles of uniforms to be worn and the brand of powder to be used have not been decided upon. But the government is seriously entertaining the suggestion that women regiments be organized to take the place of the landwehr troops when the latter, constituting about the last set of reservists, are sent to the front. The women would doubtless be employed in defensive service.

Berlin in wartime is very much the same as ever, according to Miss Clara Meyer of St. Louis. Miss Meyer spent the first two weeks of the war in Munich, after which she was in Berlin until Sept. 12. According to her story the German empire is very little affected in its daily life by the fact that half of its men are in foreign parts.

"It looks as if there are enough men in the streets of Berlin," said Miss Meyer, "to win the war all by themselves. And they are not old men and ripples, but men in the prime of life, who for one reason or another were not in the reserves. And this is in spite of the fact that 2,000,000 volunteers are being trained for use when needed. A German friend of mine who was not in the reserves wanted to enlist in this force, and visited the recruiting headquarters of eight regiments in Berlin, only to be told at each place that the ranks were full. At last he went to a small town in the suburbs, where he managed to get into a regiment being raised there."

"Both the Royal Opera in Berlin and the Charlottenburg Opera are running as usual, and with large crowds in which men are very numerous. The Berlin cafes are doing business as usual despite the war. I know, for I am of opinion that unless you could pray Christianity in a mortar, and mold it into a new paste, there is no possibility of a holy war.—Bacon.

Holy War Not Probable.

I am of opinion that unless you could pray Christianity in a mortar, and mold it into a new paste, there is no possibility of a holy war.—Bacon.

Lived just across the street from the Cafe Kerkan, and the music usually kept me awake till 3 o'clock in the morning."

Kaiser at the Front.

A typical day with the Kaiser is thus described by an eyewitness: "On this particular occasion the Kaiser had been sleeping in a French chalet, but not without elaborate precautions against a surprise attack. Soon after sunrise the Kaiser emerged from the chalet and greeted his soldiers with the customary good morning, to which all of those in the immediate vicinity replied in unison, 'Good morning, your majesty.' A motorcar was in readiness, and the Kaiser was whirled swiftly toward the front. While the troops guarding him stood rigidly at attention, ten drummers of the bodyguard beat their drums by way of a salute.

"The Imperial standard was conveyed in a second motorcar, and the officers of the Imperial suit followed in others. The cavalry of the bodyguard preceded the monarch to the place where he left the motorcar to mount his horse. As he was helped into the saddle troops saluted with their swords, and another set of drummers beat drums.

"The Kaiser rode off with his mounted guard thickly clustered around him. The standard bearer, riding immediately behind him, bore the Imperial flag. Then followed a spectacular progress from point to point in the rear of the fighting line.

"The Kaiser halted and addressed a fervent patriotic oration to one regiment and another to a second regiment. So he rode from place to place, and during the morning he delivered no fewer than nine speeches."

Oddities in the War News.

When Swiss officers superintended the exchange of German and French Red Cross officers at Basel the French and Germans exchanged cards and drank one another's health.

No matter how great the danger, British soldiers will not be kept from their bath or their tea. Between two recent attacks on a town the British officers took tea, and the men had a "rub" in the river.

After passing through the censor's hands the intrusiveness appeared recently with headlines in the first column of an article on German trademarks. The signature of the writer, Leon Bailly, also appeared, but the entire text of the story was missing. The column was simply blank.

Censor Left Writer's Name.

Several Paris newspapers present a queer aspect as a result of the censor's activities.

One day a third of the Guerre Sociale was blank. For two days Gustave Hervé vainly endeavored to communicate to this paper's readers, but the censor on both occasions slashed out the entire article, but obligingly left his name signed at the bottom.

A German officer who was captured at Rheims said:

"With what grief we learned each evening of the death of our comrades! It is necessary to have lived the battle and to find one's self in the evening without food and with only the hard earth for a bed to appreciate the truth of the words."

No German made toys are now sold in England except German toy soldiers. The demand for these is so great British artisans will have to begin making them. Little English boys want the German soldiers to pit against their British toy soldiers, and what always happens to the German soldier has diminished the supply amazingly.

Football on Battle Line.

A dispatch from the battle front in France says the French soldiers were surprised to see their English comrades retire some distance to the rear and begin lively games of football. Notwithstanding the fact that some of the British battalions lost a large proportion of their numbers in battle the zest of the men for the sport was unabated. There was a regular match between two battalions, on the result of which there was considerable betting.

DEFENSES OF ANTWERP.

How Belgian City is Protected From Advance of Hostile Army.

Antwerp, the temporary capital of Belgium, which has been the object of several sieges during the last 500 years, is protected by a modern line of fortifications designed by General Brialmont and completed in 1908. It is regarded as one of the strongest fortresses in Europe and is considered to be, because of its natural position and fortifications, as nearly impregnable as it is possible to make a modern city of such size. Including the suburbs within the outer ring of forts, the population is about 400,000 today.

The new fortified positions were designed in 1878, when it was planned to erect a strong line of forts on a curved line extending about nine miles from the walls of the city.

Fifteen forts were placed along this line, of which ten were completed in 1900 and the remaining five since then. A new enceinte, or rampart, connecting the eight forts of the inner line was begun in 1908.

All the defenses are on the right bank of the Scheldt. Two old forts, the Isabelle and the Marie, are the only protection of a fortified nature on the left bank of the Scheldt, but by nature of the ground there it is practicable to flood all the territory to the north and northwest of Antwerp which would make it impossible for an enemy to advance on the city from this direction. In consequence no strong forts have been erected there.

Hard for a Man to Believe. Mrs. Cutler of Vancouver proved by the registration of a pedometer that she had covered 400 miles in a month in walking about her kitchen and living rooms while performing her household duties.

MANY VOTES POLLED DAILY

The standing of the contestants in The Times-News contest is changing daily and those who are working are slowly beginning to draw away from those who have not yet made up their mind what to do.

But still vote coupons are coming in by the hundreds for contestants who have not been heard from since the contest was announced. Most of these coupons are sent in by friends who are anxious to see their favorites win. But if these contestants are not going to get out and hustle these votes and the help of their friends will be wasted. One cannot win unless he will get out and do a little in his own behalf. And if the contestants are not going to get out and hustle themselves, it is not fair to their friends that they accept help which will do them no possible good.

Make up your mind to-day what you are going to do. If you are not going to enter the race, let us know at once so that we can remove your name from the list. The help that you might get will then go to some person who is working and who will profit by it. And if you are still considering entering, it is now time that you started to gather votes and subscriptions for yourself. The contest is just starting and there is plenty of territory for all and those who get in at once will find that it is very little trouble to make their vote total climb and to win one of the prizes offered.

If you have not yet made up your mind what to do, come to the office and talk with the campaign manager. He will explain the plan more thoroughly to you and can show you just what an opportunity you have. No matter whether or not you enter you will be placing yourself under no obligations in asking for an explanation.

CHAPTER IX.

Dick Courtlandt's Boy.

Presently the servants brought out the tea-service. The silent dark-skinned Sikh, with his fierce curling whiskers, his flashing eyes, the semi-military, semi-oriental garb, topped by an enormous brown turban, claimed Courtlandt's attention; and it may be added that he was glad to have something to look at unembarrassedly. He wanted to catch the Indian's eye, but Rao had no glances to waste; he was concerned with the immediate business of superintending the service.

Courtlandt had never been a man to surrender to impulse. It had been his habit to form a purpose and then to go about the fulfilling of it. During the last four or five months, however, he had swung about like a weathercock in April, the victim of a thousand and one impulses. That morning he would have laughed had any one prophesied his presence here. He had fought against the inclination strongly enough at first, but as hour after hour went by his resolution weakened. His meeting Harrigan had been a stroke of luck. Still, he would have come anyhow.

"Oh, yes, I am very fond of Como," he found himself replying mechanically to Mrs. Harrigan. He gave up Rao as hopeless so far as coming to his rescue was concerned. He began, despite his repugnance, to watch Nora. And all the while Mrs. Harrigan was talking and he was replying; and she thought him charming; whereas he did not form any opinion of her at all, nor later could remember a word of the conversation.

"Tea!" bawled the colonel. The verb had its distinct uses, and one generally applied it to the colonel's outbursts without being depressed by the feeling of inelegance.

There is invariably some slight hesitation in the selection of chairs around a tea-table in the open. Nora scored the first point of this singular battle by seizing the padre on one side and her father on the other and pulling them down on the bench. It was adroit in two ways: it put Courtlandt at a safe distance and in no wise offended the younger men, who could find no cause for alarm in the close proximity of her two fathers, the spiritual and the physical. A few moments later Courtlandt saw a smile of malice part her lips, for he found himself between Celeste and the inevitable tramp.

"Touched!" he murmured, for he was a thorough sportsman and appreciated a good point even when taken by his opponent.

"I never saw anything like it," whispered Mrs. Harrigan into the colonel's ear.

"Saw what?" he asked.

"Mr. Courtlandt can't keep his eyes off of Nora."

"I say!" The colonel adjusted his eye-glass, not that he expected to see more clearly by doing so, but because habit had long since turned an affection into a movement wholly mechanical. "Well, who can blame him? Gad! if I were only twenty-five or thereabouts."

Mrs. Harrigan did not encourage this regret. The colonel had never been a rich man. On the other hand, this Edward Courtlandt was very rich; he was young; and he had the entrée to the best families in Europe, which was greater in her eyes than either youth or riches. Between sips of tea she bided a fine castle in Spain.

Abbott and the Barone carried their cups and cakes over to the bench and sat down on the grass, Turkish-wise. Both simultaneously offered their cakes, and Nora took a lady finger from each. Abbott laughed and the Barone smiled.

"Oh, daddy mine!" sighed Nora drolly.

"Huh?"

"Don't let mother see those shoes."

"What's the matter with 'em? Everybody's wearing the same."

"Yes. But I don't see how you manage to do it. One shoe string is virgin white and the other is pagan brown."

"I've got nine pairs of shoes, and yet there's always something the matter," ruefully. "I never noticed when I put them on. Besides, I wasn't coming."

"That's no defense. But rest easy. I'll be as secret as the grave."

"Now, I for one would never have noticed if you hadn't called my attention," said the padre, stealing a glance at his own immaculate patent leathers.

"Ah, padre, that wife of mine has eyes like a pilot-fish. I'm in for it."

"Borrow one from the colonel before you go home," suggested Abbott.

"That's not half bad," gratefully.

Harrigan began to recount the trials of forgetfulness.

"Slyly from the corner of her eye Nora looked at Courtlandt, who was at that moment staring thoughtfully into his tea cup and stirring the contents industriously. His face was a little thinner, but aside from that he had changed scarcely at all; and then, because these two years had left so little mark upon his face, a tinge of unreasonable anger ran over her. 'Men have died and worms have eaten them,' she thought cynically. Perhaps the air between them was sufficiently charged with electricity to convey the impression across the intervening space; for his eyes came up quickly,

She dropped her glance to Abbott, transferred it to the Barone, and finally let it rest on her father's face. Four handsome men she had never seen.

"You never told me you knew Courtlandt," said Harrigan, speaking to Abbott.

"Just happened that way. We went to school together. When I was little they used to make me wear curls and wide collars. Many's the time Courtlandt walloped the school bullies for musing me up. I don't see him much these days. Once in a while he walks in. That's all. Always seems to know where his friends are, but none ever knows where he is."

Abbott proceeded to elaborate some of his friend's exploits. Nora heard, as if from afar. Vaguely she caught a glimmer of what the contest was going to be. She could see only a little way; still, she was optimistically confident of the result. She was ready, indeed, now that the shock of the meeting was past, she found herself not at all averse to a conflict. It would be something to let go the pent-up wrath of two years. Never would she speak to him directly; never would she permit him to be alone with her; never would she miss a chance to twist his heart, to humiliate him, to snub him. From her point of view, whatever game he chose to play would be a losing one. She was genuinely surprised to learn how eager she was for the game to begin so that she might gauge his strength.

"So I have heard," she was dimly conscious of saying.

"Didn't know you knew," said Abbott.

"Knew what?" rousing herself.

"That Courtlandt nearly lost his life in the eighties."

"In the eighties!" dismayed at her slip.

"Latitudes. Polar expedition."

"Heavens! I was miles away."

The padre took her hand in his own and began to pat it softly. It was the nearest he dared approach in the way of suggesting caution. He alone of them all knew.

"Oh, I believe I read something about it in the newspapers."

"Five years ago," Abbott set down his tea cup. "He's the bravest man I know. He's rather a friendless man, besides. Horror of money. Thinks every one is after him for that. Tries to throw it away; but the income piles up too quickly. See that Indian, passing the cakes? Wouldn't think it, would you, that Courtlandt carried him on his back for five miles! The Indian had fallen about a wounded tiger, and the beater was miles off. I've been watching. They haven't even spoken to each other. Courtlandt's probably forgotten all about the incident, and the Indian would die rather than embarrass his savior before strangers."

"Your friend, then, is quite a hero?"

What was the matter with Nora's voice? Abbott looked at her wonderingly. The tone was hard and unmusical.

"He couldn't be anything else, being Dick Courtlandt's boy," volunteered Harrigan, with enthusiasm. "It runs in the family."

"It seems strange," observed Nora, "that I never heard you mention that you knew a Mr. Courtlandt."

"Why, Mr. Courtlandt, a lot of things nobody mentions unless chance brings them up. Courtlandt—the one I knew—has been dead these sixteen years. If I knew he had had a son, I'd forgotten all about it. The only graveyard isn't on the hillside; there's one under everybody's thatch."

The padre nodded approvingly.

Nora was not particularly pleased with this phase in the play. Courtlandt would find a valiant champion in her father, who would blunder in when some fine passes were being exchanged. And she could not tell him; she would have cut out her tongue rather. It was true that she held the principal cards in the game, but she could not table them and claim the tricks as in bridge. She must patiently wait for him to lead, and he, as she very well knew, would lead a card at a time, and then only after mature deliberation. From the explanation which attended the prospect of battle she passed into a state of depression, which lasted the rest of the afternoon.

"Will you forgive me?" asked Celeste of Courtlandt. Never had she felt more ill at ease. For a full ten minutes he chatted pleasantly, with never the slightest hint regarding the episode in Paris. She could stand it no longer. "Will you forgive me?"

"For what?"

"That night in Paris."

"Do not permit that to bother you in the least. I was never going to recall it."

"Was it so unpleasant?"

"On the contrary, I was much amused."

"I did not tell you the truth."

"So I have found out."

"I do not believe that it was you," impulsively.

"Thanks. I had nothing to do with Miss Harrigan's imprisonment."

"Do you feel that you could make a confidant of me?"

He smiled. "My dear Miss Fournier, I have come to the place where I distrust even myself."

"Forgive my curiosity!"

Courtlandt held out his cup to Rao.

"I am glad to see you again."

"Ah, Sahib!"

The little Frenchwoman was torn with curiosity and repression. She wanted to know what causes had produced this unusual drama which was unfolding before her eyes. To be presented with effects which had no apparent causes was maddening. It was not dissimilar to being taken to the second act of a modern problem play and being forced to leave before the curtain rose upon the third act. She had laid all the traps her intelligent mind could invent; and Nora had calmly walked over them or around. Nora's mind was Celtic; French in its adroitness and Irish in its watchfulness and tenacity. And now she had set her arts of persuasion in motion (aided by a pliant beauty) to lift a corner of the veil from this man's heart. Checkmate!

"I should like to help you," she said, truthfully.

"In what way?"

"It was useless, but she continued: 'She does not know that you went to Florida Desimone's that night.'"

"And yet she sent you to watch me."

"But so many things happened afterward that she evidently forgot."

"That is possible."

"I was asleep when the pistol went off. Oh, you must believe that it was purely accidental! She was in a terrible state until morning. What if she had killed you, what if she had killed you! She seemed to harp upon that phrase."

Courtlandt turned a sober face toward her. She might be sincere, and then again she might be playing the first game over again, in a different guise. "It would have been embarrassing if the bullet had found its mark. He met her eyes squarely, and she saw that his were totally free from surprise or agitation or interest.

"Will you be here long?"

"It depends."

"Upon Nora?" persistently.

"The weather."

"You are hopeless."

"No; on the contrary, I am the most optimistic man in the world."

She looked into this reply very carefully. If he had hopes of winning Nora Harrigan, optimistic he certainly must be. Perhaps it was not optimism. Rather might it not be a purpose made of steel, bendable but not breakable, reinforced by a knowledge of conditions which she would have given worlds to learn?

"Is she not beautiful?"

"I am not a poet."

"Wait a moment," her eyes widening. "I believe you know who did commit that outrage."

For the first time he frowned.

"Very well; I promise not to ask any more questions."

"That would be very agreeable to me." Then, as if he realized the rudeness of his reply, he added: "Before I leave I will tell you all you wish to know, upon one condition."

"Tell it!"

"You will say nothing to any one, you will question neither Miss Harrigan nor myself, nor permit yourself to be questioned."

"I agree."

"And now, will you not take me over to your friends?"

"Over there?"

"Why, yes. We can sit upon the grass. They seem to be having a good time."

What a man! Take him over, into the enemy's camp? Nothing would be more agreeable to her. Who would be the stronger, Nora or this provoking man?

So they crossed over and joined the group. The padre smiled. It was a situation such as he loved to study: a strong man and a strong woman, at war. But nothing happened; not a ripple anywhere to disclose the agitation beneath. The man laughed and the woman laughed, but they spoke not to each other, nor looked once into each other's eyes.

The sun was dropping toward the western tops. The guests were leaving by twos and threes. The colonel had prevailed upon his dinner guests not to bother about going back to the village to dress, but to dine in the clothes they wore. Finally, none re-

Barone, the padre and Courtlandt, and they talked noisily and agreeably concerning man affairs until Rao gravely announced that dinner was served. It was only then, during the lull which followed, that light was shed upon the puzzle which had been subconsciously stirring Harrigan's mind: Nora had not once spoken to the son of his old friend.

FURS

Some one has said: that furs make a plain woman beautiful and a beautiful woman ravishing.

That may be a bit of poetic extravagance, but there is no question but furs enhance the costume and add to the beauty of the face.

The average woman does not buy furs as she does a new hat—with the thought that if it is not satisfactory she can easily get another. She buys them after careful consideration and selection, because it means a large expenditure of money and, therefore, must be made to last several seasons.

It is also true that the average woman does not know very much concerning fur value. It is, therefore, necessary that she buys from only reliable fur dealers.

In the advertising columns of The Times are to be seen the announcements of fur sales by reliable merchants in almost every edition.

START OF A FORTUNE.

The Boy Who Began His Career by Buying Soap at Auction.

A boy eleven years old stood at an auction room door and gazed with interest at the crowd of men gathered round the auctioneer. His curiosity led him to enter the room. His attention was attracted to several boxes of toilet soap, the kind, he noticed, that his mother used at home. He had often been sent to the drug store to buy it for her. "Ah," he said to himself, "perhaps I can buy this soap cheap. I will sell it and make some money."

As fast as his feet would carry him he ran to the drug store where his mother traded and sought out the proprietor. "How much would you give me for a box of that soap such as my mother buys?" he asked. The druggist, ready to please the boy, named a certain price. When the youngster asked if he could use several boxes the druggist thought it was a good joke and replied that he could use all that the lad would sell him.

The boy hastened home. He emptied his little savings bank and ran back to the auction rooms with the money carefully wrapped in a handkerchief. The soap was still unsold, and the boy edged his way through the crowd to the platform. When the soap came under the auctioneer's hammer the boy's little piping voice made the first bid. The other buyers were so amused at his youth and his serious manner that they let him carry off his transaction without a contest, and the boy got twenty-two boxes of toilet soap at a small fraction of their value. When the auctioneer asked his name he answered, "Charles Yerkes."

The lad took the boxes of soap to his purchaser, the druggist, who, open-eyed with surprise, inquired where he had got them. "I bought them at the auction," he said proudly.

"I could have done that myself," complained the druggist, but as he had promised to buy the soap he had to keep his word.

That was the beginning of an unusual business career. In later years Charles Yerkes became famous in both England and America as a financier and a conductor of great business enterprises.—Youth's Companion.

TORPEDO BOAT DESTROYERS.

Work They Are Supposed to Perform in Time of War.

As the name implies, torpedo boat destroyers were originally built to combat the smaller torpedo boat, which had become such a serious menace to the battleships and the large cruisers that searchlights and rapid fire guns could not be depended upon for protection, says a writer in Scribner's Magazine. Gradually, however, the duties of the destroyer were extended until they included all that was formerly done by the torpedo boat and much besides.

The mere fact that a modern destroyer is three or four times as large as one of the earlier boats renders it so much more seaworthy and capable of carrying so much more fuel that the radius of action of torpedo boat craft has been enormously increased, and they have become more and more dangerous to an enemy's fleet.

The duties of a modern flotilla may be tabulated in this way: First—Scouting. This comprises locating and reporting the position of the enemy and keeping in touch with him as long as may be necessary.

Second—Protection of one's own fleet from night attacks of the enemy's destroyers. This includes not only locating and reporting the position of the hostile torpedo craft, but, if necessary, attacking them with your guns and sinking or driving them away before they can force home an attack against battleships.

Third—Attacking the battleships of the enemy with your torpedoes. This is, of course, the paramount duty of every vessel in the flotilla.

Fourth—In addition to the above "regular" duties, destroyers are frequently used in what might be called "gunboat work"—patrolling the enemy's coast, running up his rivers where the big ships cannot go, overtaking and capturing his merchant vessels and firing on troops and field batteries ashore.

BUMPER CORN CROP FORECAST IN REPORT
Tobacco, Potato, Oats, Apples Also Show Increase.

Washington, Oct. 8.—Greater corn crop products by 78,000,000 bushels and great improvement in tobacco, increasing the prospects of that crop over the forecast in September by 92,000,000 pounds, were the features of the department of agriculture's crop report. It is virtually the last crop report for the year 1914.

An increase of 11,000,000 bushels in the potato crop, 21,000,000 bushels in the oats and 10,000,000 bushels in the apple crop also were forecasted.

Spring wheat showed a slight decrease, being 4,000,000 bushels under the September forecast, yet the combined crop of winter wheat and spring wheat makes this year's harvest of that grain a record one.

ARMIES CLASH IN RUSSIAN POLAND
Believed to be First Stage of Decisive Battle.

THE FIGHTING IS DESPERATE
German Forces Reinforced Austrian Army and Engaged Russians at Epatow, Near Cracow.

Berlin, Oct. 8.—General Von Hindenberg, the German strategist, who formerly commanded the German forces in the North Prussian campaign, is now directing the Austro-German forces in a big battle believed to be in progress near Opatow, Russian Poland.

Opatow is about seventy-five miles northeast of Cracow, and the news of this engagement substantiates previous reports that the Dual Alliance had sent an army into Russian Poland to meet the Russian army which had for its objective the invasion of Germany.

The Austrians fought the first stages of the battle at Opatow alone, but they were hard pressed and General Von Hindenberg hastened to their aid with heavy reinforcements.

The opposing armies are drawn up on the spurs of the Lysagory mountains, and it is at this point that the decisive battle of the eastern campaign of the war will probably be fought.

The Russians are throwing large detachments of their central army into the breach at Opatow. This central army is composed of the flower of the czar's fighting forces and numbers more than a million men.

Opatow is less than 125 miles from Sedletz, where the czar is reported to be in command of the field operations of his army.

The German forces on the frontier of East Prussia have assumed a strategic defensive movement. They have abandoned the bombardment of Osowetz fortress, in Russian Poland, after setting the city of Osowetz on fire with their shells.

They were able to retire with their siege guns and a pontoon train. They destroyed the railroad on the frontier and now are holding in check superior forces from heavily entrenched positions near Drostken.

The fighting at Augustowo and Suwalki was most sanguinary. The German machine guns finally turned the scale of battle in favor of the Germans, but the slaughter of the German artillerymen was terrific. One German battery lost all its men, and cavalrymen had to be drafted to serve the guns.

Germans Fighting Stubbornly.
Petrograd, Oct. 8.—Russian troops have captured several of the German positions between Lyck and Wirbalen at the point of the bayonet, it was announced at the war office, but the Germans, heavily reinforced, are fighting stubbornly at Bakalarzew, just east of the Russian frontier.

The Germans have mounted artillery on the heights forming the west bank of the Rospuda river, and they are fighting to hold this position as a defense for Margobowa, East Prussia, which is an important point in the Mazurian line of fortifications.

PRINCE EITEL WOUNDED
In Third Member of Kaiser's Family Injured in War.

The Hague, Oct. 8.—Prince Eitel Friedrich, second son of Kaiser Wilhelm, has been wounded in the knee and taken to the rear of the fighting line, according to special dispatches received here.

The censorship did not permit of passing a message indicating where the prince was wounded. It was stated that he fell from his horse while joining in a charge.

Prince Eitel Friedrich is the third member of the imperial German family to be invalided in the war.

OSTEND IS BELGIAN CAPITAL
Germans Prepare to Bombard Antwerp and Government and People Flee.

Amsterdam (by way of London), Oct. 8.—The Nieuw Dan Dag says that the Belgian government was moved from Antwerp to Ostend.

The paper says that the German commander of the forces besieging Antwerp sent an officer carrying a white flag into the city Wednesday to announce that the bombardment of the temporary capital would commence in three hours. Many refugees left for Holland and the government was transferred to Ostend.

HINTS FOR THE BUSY HOUSEWIFE
Glove With a Handy Cash Pocket In the Palm.

Not a few persons habitually resort to the use of the palm of the glove as a receptacle for carfare or railway tickets, and now the glove-maker has come to the rescue with a glove in which there is a regularly constructed pocket in the palm, with a locking flap to guarantee the safety of anything that may be placed therein. The pocket is placed on the inside of the palm, so that its presence is not the least unsightly and would be entirely unknown were it not for the fact that the little buttoned flap extends through the regular opening of the glove. When this flap is opened and turned back the interior of the pocket is easily reached. The invention is that of a woman residing in Massachusetts.

Kitchen Kinks.
Cleansing with mustard is said to remove the smell of fish from pots. If a knife is placed under a tumbler or glass dish boiling milk or water can be put in without breaking the glass. Rusty looking silk can be made clean and new looking if sponged with the water in which potatoes have been boiled. When boiling eggs wet the shells thoroughly in cold water before dropping in the boiling water and they will not crack. After washing lamp chimneys try polishing them with dry salt. This gives the glass a brilliant shine and prevents it from cracking.

Potato Soup.
Cook potatoes in boiling water until soft. Rub through a coarse sieve, and for each pint use one quart of milk, two tablespoonsful butter, two tablespoonsful flour, one and one-half teaspoonful salt, one-eighth teaspoonful pepper and two slices of (more) onion. Send the milk with onion, remove the onion, add potato pulp and seasonings. Melt the butter, add the flour and stir until well blended. Stir into the boiling soup and cook one minute. The potato water may be used in place of part of the milk. Celery, onion, spinach, cabbage, turnip or salsify soup may be made in the same way. The thinner soups need more flour for thickening.

Mustard Pickles.
One dozen large yellow cucumbers cut into quarters and remove the rind and seed; then cut each piece through the center. Sprinkle with salt and let stand overnight. In the morning wipe each piece with a dry cloth. Heat a quart of vinegar, add two cupfuls of sugar and one tablespoonful of mixed spices, bring to the boiling point, pack the cucumbers in jars, pour over each jar the boiling hot liquid, add a level teaspoonful of mustard seed to each jar and seal while hot.

For Filling Cracks.
The dust and dirt that occur in the gaps between floor boards, caused by the shrinkage of the wood, are capital places for breeding and harboring of insects. All such crevices should be thoroughly cleared and brushed out, then filled with either putty or plaster of paris. The latter should be mixed with stain of the same color as the floor. When the putty is quite hard it may also be stained or painted as wished.

Celery With Tomato Sauce.
Cut off the green leaves clean and wash the celery stalks and then throw them into boiling water and boil fast for twenty minutes. Drain well, put them into a dish and pour a pint of tomato sauce or tomato paste diluted with hot water over them.

O, for a Peaceful Place!
Wherever on this earth you go, You're sure to strike both war and woe, From Europe unto Mexico, The world is fighting mad, And even these United States Are battling over taxes' rates, And other trouble on you grates To make you feel quite sad.

There does not seem a quiet place About for peaceful men to trace, And show you where to set your face Away from all this war. On land there is an awful scare, On water danger's everywhere, And bombs come dropping from the air, No matter where you are.

There's not a corner of the earth Which not of peace has dreadful birth, Or not to fresh quarrels giving birth, Thus peaceful living bars, I wonder if we left it there, And other worlds were in our ken, If we would find its race of men Were fighting up in Mars. —Baltimore American.

BIRTHDAY OF POSTAL CARD; PUBLIC FORCED ADOPTION.
First Issued Forty-five Years Ago by Austria—A Billion a Year Our Output.

Forty-five years ago the world's first postal card was issued by the Austrian postoffice officials at Vienna. The first in the United States appeared four years later, after public demand forced this government concession.

The principal official argument against the postal card was that such open communication offered an excellent opportunity for the writer of libel to exercise his nefarious work. Official opposition met with popular clamor in other countries, and various were the methods to force governments to follow Austria's lead.

An English army officer in India, where he missed the postal card he had become accustomed to in England, forced the Indian government to capitulate. The government had claimed there was no popular demand for postal cards. The officer set out to demonstrate that there was. He had postal cards bearing his name and rank printed and used them entirely for his own correspondence, including his friends to follow his example. The officer was ordered to discontinue this practice. He replied that if he chose to write messages on a piece of cardboard instead of on sheets of paper the authorities could not compel him to inclose the card in an envelope. The legal advisers of the government sustained him.

Today the postal card is universal. In the United States nearly 1,000,000,000 government postal cards are issued annually. The American people are spending about $10,000,000 a year for postal cards.

Two rotary presses, each capable of printing, cutting and distributing the postal cards into packages of twenty-five each package, bound with a paper band, are turning them out at the maximum rate of 4,000,000 every working day of eight hours.

LUNATICS' TABLE MANNERS.
Chronic Madmen Have a Lively Dinner Party as Guests of Illinois.

The state of Illinois gave 220 madmen a dinner at the Asylum for the Insane in Kankakee. The feast was intended to show the good effects of the gradual elimination of restraint.

Without chains, straps or guards 220 occupants of cottages Nos. 4 and 12 found themselves at liberty on the lawn in a distant part of the hospital grounds.

The same guests will not soon forget that dinner. As soon as the first course was put on the tables a mad man smashed a plate of soup on his neighbor's head. With course No. 2 a diner brought a heavy mug down on the head of the patient next to him.

With course No. 3 a patient who was reading a newspaper upside down aroused the anger of a neighbor and was knocked in a heap. An imbecile ran up and down beside the table choo-chooing in imitation of a locomotive. All the disturbers were marshaled back to their cottages in safety after the dinner.

"These men are the most violent and unreliable chronic maniacs in Illinois," said Dr. Fish. "Aside from the pleasure the outing undoubtedly gives these men after so many years' restraint the innovation has a therapeutic effect which is desirable."

Invents Pocket Wireless.
A dispatch to the London Times from Rome says that it is reported from Aquila that a priest named Domenico Argenterli has invented a system for receiving wireless messages whereby communications may be received even in closed rooms. No poles or batteries are needed. The apparatus is of the simplest description and can be carried in one's pocket.

FISH is so much cheaper than meat that it is wise at this time to make as much use of it as possible. The great variety of fish and the many ways of serving it which may be taken advantage of make it possible frequently to substitute it for meat.

Potato Omelet.—Take the yolks of three eggs and beat very light. Season one cupful of cold mashed potatoes with salt, pepper, one-half cupful of milk and a little chopped parsley. Beat the yolks into this, then add beaten whites. Heat pan piping hot and butter; pour omelet into it. Brown lightly, turn and serve very hot.

Boiled Black Bass.—Put in a pot enough slightly salted water to cover fish, add one gill of vinegar, one onion, eight whole peppers and a blade of mace. Sew up the fish in a piece of thin cheesecloth fitted snugly to it. Lay in water, bring slowly to boil, then boil steadily, allowing twelve minutes to each pound of fish. When done remove cloth, lay fish on platter and serve with cream sauce.

Pepper and Grapefruit Salad.—Cut slices from the stem ends of six green peppers and remove seeds. Refill with grapefruit pulp, finely cut celery and English walnut meats broken in pieces, allowing twice as much grapefruit as celery and two nut meats to each pepper. Arrange on chicory or lettuce leaves and serve with mayonnaise dressing.

Stuffed Cucumbers.—Take four good sized cucumbers, peel, cut in halves lengthwise, and scoop out the seeds. Mix together one-half pint of bread-crumbs, one level teaspoonful of salt, one saltspoonful of pepper, one-half cupful of finely chopped nuts, one good sized onion, one tablespoonful of chutney. Stuff the cucumbers; fasten them together with wooden skewers or tie with string. Put six tablespoonfuls of olive oil in a shallow baking pan; when hot put in the cucumbers, turn them until carefully browned on all sides. Add one-half cupful of water and bake slowly for one and one-half hours, basting frequently.

CLANNISH MANXMEN.

They Still Use Their Own Tongue in Promulgating Their Laws.

The Isle of Man is in the Irish channel, about equidistant from England, Scotland and Ireland and is famed for its lovely scenery, excellent climate and the quaint old world flavor of its place and people.

Home rule has been enjoyed by the Manxmen for many years. Although there are fewer than 60,000 Manxmen, they have their own parliament and courts. The house of keys and the house of lords hold annual sessions in Douglas, the capital, and the laws they pass are read aloud every year from Tynwald hill. The statutes are proclaimed in the Manx tongue, a language as distinct from English as Italian or German.

The Isle of Man was long a bone of contention among the kings of Northumberland, Scotland, Norway and England. The government as it is in operation today in Hall Caine's island, was established by Orry, a Scandinavian adventurer who made himself king of the island. He divided his kingdom into six shendings, and this division, with four municipal districts, still serves in the election of members of the house of keys. The bishopric of the Isle of Man is declared to have been founded by St. Patrick, who stopped off and established the see while on his way to Ireland.—New York World.

Germany's Uhlans.
The Polish hussar was borrowed from the Polish military system. Uhlans means simply lancer. Hussar is a word that comes from the language of the Hungarians, meaning twenty. It commemorates the time when every group of twenty men in the kingdom was required to furnish one cavalryman. So it means the representative of twenty men. The word dates from the time of Mathias Corvinus, when in national Hungarian levies every twenty men had to furnish one fully equipped horseman, who, in accordance with the fact, was called "hussar."—Brooklyn.

THE WHITE DEATH

By WILLIAM CHANDLER

In 1850 Mlle. Antoinette Garnier, named for the ill fated queen of France who lost her head on the guillotine, was one of the most attractive of the younger girls of New Orleans. The Crescent City was in those days one of the gayest cities, if not the gayest, in the United States. Being a city of the French, it contained a number of emigres of the revolution whereby the Bourbon kings lost the throne, and they were of the noblesse, some of them having the right to titles that they did not use. New Orleans socially was delightful, but more foreign than any other American city.

Edwin Wentworth, a young northern from the state of Maryland, went to the Crescent City to spend a winter, attracted thither by the reports of the unique social life. Having letters to the "best" people, he was invited everywhere. He met Mlle. Garnier, and a love affair ensued. It was arranged that when the spring came on they should be married and both go north to the groom's home.

In those days there was frequent intercourse between New Orleans and France. While desirable persons came out to the new world to make homes for themselves, occasionally one would come whose absence would have been preferable. Among these was Antoine Le Volsier, a duelist who had killed so many opponents that he had acquired the sobriquet of the White Death.

One evening at a cafe young Wentworth saw him, asked who he was and on being told remarked in a voice loud enough for Le Volsier to hear that the authorities of Louisiana should ship the fellow back to France. The result was a challenge. If Wentworth had come from Massachusetts or any northern state he might have declined it. But, hailing from a border state, in which dueling had not entirely died out, he felt compelled to fight. He was rash to have made the remark in the White Death's hearing and rash to go on the field with one who had fought twenty duels and killed ten men. Wentworth was entirely unskilled in the use of weapons, and there was no time to learn how to use them.

The result was that he went out to meet his antagonist, and another murder was done.

Mlle. Garnier was so crushed by the tragedy that for awhile her life seemed to be in danger, and as she recovered her strength she showed signs of mental derangement. The social world saw her no more, and so rapid are the changes in the world of fashion that in a few months her place there seemed to have been filled and she forgotten.

It was not long after Wentworth's murder that the cholera visited America, and New Orleans was not immune from its devastations. But it seemed that nothing could even temporarily obliterate the people's desire for amusement. A masked ball was given in a large hall, and, although it was not an affair to call out fashionable society, especially at such a time, many of the bon ton went there to divert themselves of the gloom surrounding them.

The contrast within and without the hall was a fearful one. Within was a dance of life, without a dance of death. But the death from without broke in among the merry-makers. A figure entered the hall dressed in white flowing robes, the mask as white as chalk, with great hollow eyes, a grinning mouth and rotten teeth. It advanced to one wearing a Louis XV. costume and stood staring at him. The merriment ceased, and all eyes were bent on the two figures. The Louis XV. figure took off his mask and displayed the features of Le Volsier.

The reason for his unmasking was apparent. He had seen himself confronted by one dressed as the White Death and was desirous to avenge the insult.

"Whoever you are who has offered this affront you shall pay for it," he said.

"I am the White Death," replied Le Volsier, referring to a wood on the outskirts of the city where duels were fought.

"Not without a reason. For me (the White Death) to confront you, the White Death, is no insult. Take that!" He struck Le Volsier with the back of his hand, drawing a drop of blood, which seemed to come from a ring he wore on his finger. Le Volsier paid no attention to the blow other than to say that if his antagonist was satisfied he was; that he would expect to meet the person who had insulted him as soon as they could reach the wood; then turning, he started for an exit.

It was noticed before he had taken a dozen steps that he staggered, and before he reached the door he fell. The specter followed him and stood over him, looking down upon him. Le Volsier writhed in agony, but kept his eye fixed on his other self, the White Death. Presently the latter removed his mask and exposed the features, not of a man, but a woman. Some there were who recognized her as Mlle. Garnier, though she was much changed from the beauty she had been before her lover's death.

"You are no longer the White Death," she said to the dying man. "I have taken your place to avenge your last victim. This ring is more powerful than any weapon of yours. It contains a deadly poison."

Medical Advertising TURN HAIR DARK WITH SAGE TEA If Mixed with Sulphur It Darkens so Naturally Nobody can Tell

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grand-mother's treatment, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy" for about 50 cents a bottle. It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive; besides, prevents dandruff, itching scalp and falling hair.
